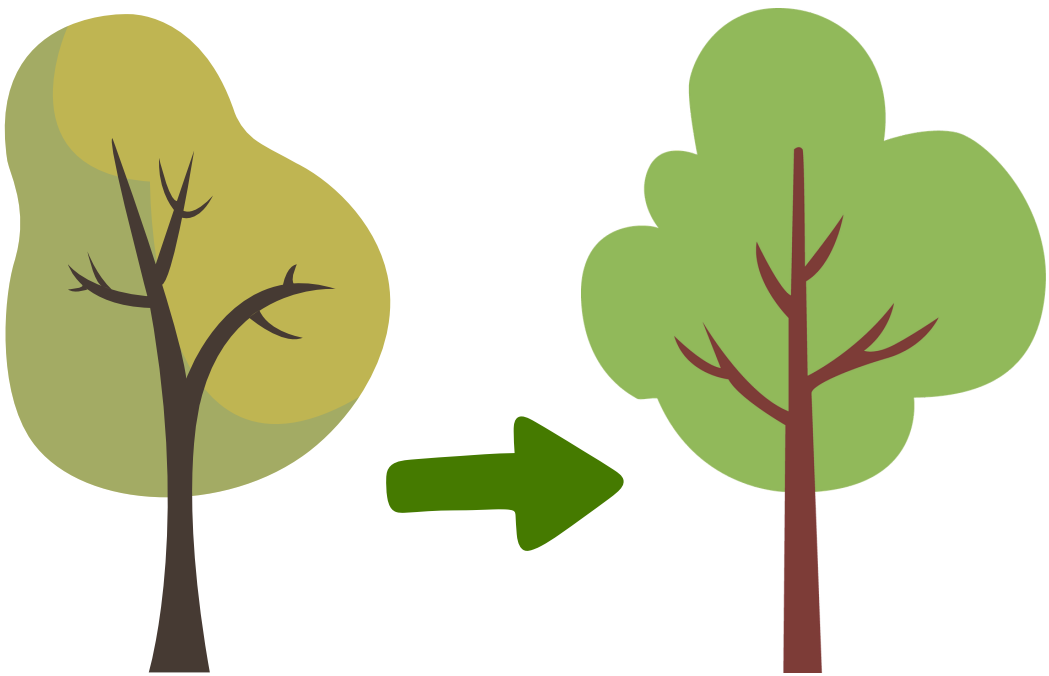
Ecosystem

An ecosystem is a community of plants, animals and sometimes people. The habitat itself is also part of it – it is also known as a biotope. Ecosystems can change over time or be disrupted by external factors, such as a fire or pollution in the water.

Regeneration

When something that was broken or damaged gradually recovers and grows back.



lush

When lots of plants are growing densely and vigorously, so that everything looks green and full.

